HITLER'S "SECRET WEAPON" AGAINST THE UNITED STATES IS JAPANESE ATTACK ON HAWAII, TOKYO'S DECLARATION OF WAR

Bitterness Against America is Rooted in Fear, is Opinion Arrived At by Writer in Interview Granted by Fuehrer A Few Weeks Ago—Germans Told Constantly They Must Be Prepared To Face America at War

(Note: Pierre J. Huss, for eight years chief Berlin correspondent of International News Service and who has just returned to this country from Germany, herewith presents the third and concluding instalment of the last interview given to any newspaper correspondent by Adolf Hitler.)

In the first two instalments, graphically describing his meeting with the unusually loquacious Fuehrer on the Russian front, Huss told of Hitler's fear of President Roosevelt and America's military might. He set forth how Hitler is clinging to the fragile hope that Great Britain and the United States, being democracies, will ultimately throw out Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt, leaving him master of the world.

In today's third and concluding instalment, Huss reveals for the first time what really was Hitler's "secret weapon" against America—the Japanese attack upon Hawaii and Tokyo's declaration of war. In minute detail, Huss tells how the Fuehrer plotted this deadly, infamous, sneak attack upon the United States in a desperate effort to kill America before it could be mobilized for war.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Hitler discoursed on, scarcely pausing for breath. Inside his peculiar mind he was then and there already at grips with Roosevelt, mentally grasping for the throat of his deadly foe and tearing him to bits in an inborn rage over wrongs and grievances he believes he has suffered at the hands of the man with the smile in Washington.

I sat there listening to this tirade of bitterness rooted in fear; he gave the impression of a man who had had victory in his grasp only to have it torn out of his hands again by the elusive foe who haunted his dreams.

Hitler repeated much of what had been said often and which since has become superceded through the declaration of war between America and Germany. He declared that American ships of any kind coming under the range of torpedo tubes or German guns enroute to England would be sent to the bottom. His U-boats, he said, were equal to the task of enforcing that blockade against the combined sea power of England and America, and his planes and surface craft would drive rivets into that steel net on the Atlantic around England.

From his side of the military viewpoint, he argued, there was nothing to fear from America.

"Long ago," Hitler said, "I saw America inevitably being led into this war. There is a limit to everything and people playing with dynamite are going to get hurt."

"I told the German people day in and day out since more than a year now that they must be prepared to face America at war. I felt it my responsibility to keep our people mentally and morally prepared for all such eventualities. I also took all the military precautions essential to the safety of our position over here."

"Today I have a clear conscience and feel sure that come what may, America from the military standpoint can do nothing to hurt us on this continent. Her entry into this war will cost many a brave U-boat or Naval or Luftwaffe German his life."

"We may be compelled by American aggression over here to undertake new tasks to defend ourselves. Whatever that is, we shall not be afraid to do it, and meet the enemy man to man."

He caught himself suddenly, peering fixedly at the dog, and said: "There is more than one way of fighting America. I can let Herr Roosevelt in for a few surprises. It's all a matter of how you do it."

"Of course, I cannot walk across the Atlantic and America from the standpoint of invasion, might as well be up on the moon, but on the other hand the same goes for Herr Roosevelt. He has lots of ships at his disposal to bring an expedition over here for an attack on us or to occupy some undefended islands this side of the Atlantic, but I hold the coasts of Europe and I am ready any time he wants to come over here with one million or five million to fight it out once and for all."

"We Germans know we are fighting for our very existence, be that in Africa or on the Don. We Nazis also have a cause to fight for and nobody can rob us of the ideals and principles we fought for over the past twenty years."

"Do you think for one moment that any single German outside of an idiot or two ever wants to go back to the days of hunger, starvation, and Bolshevism inside our land?"

"There can be no choice, even if they wanted it."

"Stalin and his Red armies are practically smashed, sitting over there beyond the mud and snow hoping against hope that England and America will save them from the final reckoning. There have been minor setbacks through climate, transportation and other circumstances but these difficulties all will fade away when the time comes to resume the grand scale operations we have now suspended."

"Stalin can go sit behind his Urals and talk as he wants to, he will then no longer be a factor in this world. Bolshevism will never again be permitted to gain a foothold on this continent. Russia no longer will be just a vast armament factory exploited and dedicated solely to the task of generating sufficient military power behind a curtain of silence to carry through the Moscow dream of world revolution."

(Editor's Note: This portion of the interview clearly proves how greatly Hitler erred in under-estimating Russia. When the interview was granted. Continued on Page Two

QUAKERTOWN, Dec. 31—Quakertown's chief of police, Harry B. Welsh, has accepted an appointment to the U. S. Secret Service. Welsh, who for the past five years has been chief of police here, will assume his new duties on the 2nd of January, reporting to Philadelphia for instructions.

He will be connected with the same branch of government services as his brother James, whose police career tallies closely with the local chief's.

The Welsh brothers served together in the state highway patrol, following which they became chiefs of local forces in Bucks county.

James was chief of police in Doylestown for several years before entering the Secret Service about a year ago. He is now assigned to the White House detail.

Harry Welsh has had 18 years of police duty, beginning with the state patrol in 1925. In 1926 he was made corporal in charge of the Langhorne station. Urges for Building of Brotherhood in the World

"Building a Brotherhood in a Bleeding World" was the subject ably presented yesterday by the Rev. John Muyskens, of Jenkintown, when he spoke before members of Bristol Rotary Club in the Elks home.

"If we believe in peace for the good of mankind, we will go forward with brotherhood," he added.

Dr. John J. Hargrave was the presiding officer.

Fleetwings Employees To Buy Bonds Weekly

So that all Fleetwings employees can have the opportunity of supporting the U. S. Victory Program with their money as well as their time and strength, the company is instituting a plan which will make it easy for all members of the organization to purchase U. S. Defense Bonds.

Starting shortly, the Fleetwings workers will be able to buy bonds by means of having the purchase price deducted weekly from their pay checks. There will be no limit to the amount of deductions that the employee might wish to have made.

Application blanks will be distributed this week and deductions under the plan will start in late January. So that the employees' money will start working for them and for the U. S. quickly, the bonds will be in denominations of $25.00; thus it will take only a relatively short time for an employee to build up a large enough fund, through deductions from his weekly checks, to acquire the bonds.

FLEETWINGS WILL TRAIN WOMEN TO DO SHEET METAL WORK

Will Receive Applications Beginning Friday Morning

NOT TO REPLACE MEN

Employment of Women in New Vocations Made Necessary By Scarcity of Male Help

Announcement was made today that starting Friday, the Fleetwings Training School, which prepares its students for jobs in the large Fleetwings aircraft shop, will be open to women candidates, as well as men.

In making the announcement, W. E. Strang, Fleetwings Personnel Director, states that any woman between the age of 18 and 25, who has had a high school education, will be eligible for consideration for the training course. No previous technical training or experience is necessary. Applications for the course can be made starting Friday at the Fleetwings Personnel Department.

The decision to permit women to the training course came about with the increased demands for workers in the expanding Fleetwings plant and the accompanying departure of some employees to the Army. It was emphasized that the move to train women will not in any way jeopardize the jobs or opportunities for jobs of men.

It is anticipated that the training course for the women will extend over a 16-week period, similar to that for men, and will include instruction in sheet-metal work, riveting, blue-print reading, and the other operations that women can suitably handle. Recent experience with women workers in the Fleetwings plant has proved that the women are experts on a good number of jobs, particularly where the work is intricate and requires dextrous and nimble fingers.

The women will attend school for 40 hours per week at no cost to themselves and following their completion jobs in the Fleetwings plant. All of the course they will be eligible for the facilities that make for an intensive training are provided in the Fleetwings school—drill presses, grinders, riveting tools, a separate bench for each student—even a library. Practically all of the training for the women will be in the form of shop practice, with only a small portion of the day spent in classroom instruction.

Women candidates for the school may apply to the Fleetwings Personnel building on Radcliffe street in Bristol anytime, starting Friday, January 2.

Russians Extend Offensive To Crimean Peninsula

By International News Service
MOSCOW, Dec. 31—Extension of the Russian offensive to the Crimean Peninsula and recapture of the strategic ports of Kerch and Theodosia by combined Red army and navy assaults were announced by the Soviet High Command today.

(A British radio broadcast heard by NBC said: "The Berlin radio admits that 'Russian forces have taken a place on the Crimea' which must refer to the capture of Kerch. Berlin also states that one Soviet destroyer was sunk off the Crimean coast in the Sea of Azov and that one Russian cruiser was damaged.")

Red Army forces recrossed the narrow strait of Kerch under cover of thundering navy fire and landed on the southeastern Crimean coast, Theodosia. Both ports were reconquered after "stubborn resistance," the High Command said. The entire operation was completed in two days.

A NEW YEAR

By New Year's Day the mellowness of the holiday spirit has begun to ebb. It is still cordial, but the human heart which nourished it either grows weary or is confronted by what it chooses to recognize as the stern realities of life—which today are more stern and more real than at any previous period in the nation's history.

It is quite evident that the spirit of Christmas and New Year's are not the same. Both are festive, but there is a bit more seriousness in the latter. The salutations of the holiday season are linked, but more by convention than by logic. By New Year's Day the average person has had his or her fling at merriment. It is the future that commands sobriety of thought.

So here as elsewhere there are greetings and expressions of good wishes. Every man knows a new year lies ahead. None knows its content. Most persons realize it will have its hazards, its difficulties and its disappointments. A new course is to be run, a new journey started.

Perhaps the real basis of hope for a happy New Year is the genuine faith of people that in the unknown future fate will deal kindly; that men will possess the courage and capacity to tackle and settle the problems of life; that disappointment can be borne with steadfastness; that sorrow will not, if it should come, be overwhelming; that good health and contentment shall be apportioned to all.

These are the wishes of New Year's, repeated more fervently this year because of war the length and extent of which no man can now foresee. Back of them is something of the same sort of thing shouted and waved and wirelessed to soldiers going to the front. It is a bon voyage wish and springs from the hope that the future will be kind.

WAR CENSORSHIP

President Roosevelt has issued an executive order naming Byron Price, formerly executive news editor of the Associated Press, as director of censorship. A censorship policy board was also created, headed by Postmaster General Walker.

The War Emergency Bill empowers the President to establish a war censorship of the press and all avenues of communication except the telephone, and it is generally recognized that some form of censorship is necessary to the protection of the country's war activities.

This is not to attempt to deny that in a democracy, where government is by consent of the governed and public opinion is the final arbiter, it is also necessary to provide the people with true and complete information. Their conclusions can be no better than their facts, and since their conclusions exercise the sovereign power, authentic information must be imparted to them in good time. This the American newspapers have always been able to do.

Appointment of Price to the important job of administering the censorship is so good that if all the groups affected by the censorship could have had the opportunity to name a censor, Price probably would have been their choice. He has the complete confidence of the press. His orders will be carried out in spirit as well as with scrupulous regard for the letter.

"THURSDAY'S CHILD" by VERA BROWN

FROM THE OLD RHYME: "THURSDAY'S CHILD HAS FAR TO GO"

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

They stopped at Sonny's rooming house for her clothes and then headed for New York, but not before Sonny exacted a promise from O'Regan that he would not take her to Long Island.

O'Regan telephoned Kirk from Saratoga. They'd drive the night through, going straight to New York.

"How can I face them all?" Sonny kept asking.
"You won't have to. I'm to take you to a friend of Kirk's in New York named Ann Carmichael. Besides, I don't think the Hollisters want to see you any more than you want to see them."

"I suppose not," she conceded. The towns slipped by endlessly. It was getting daylight when they reached Manhattan.

At the apartment house on 72nd street where Ann lived, the doorman looked askance at the two disheveled strangers, but Miss Carmichael was upstairs waiting. He had had his orders. Ann was at the door to meet them.

As Sonny walked in, she saw Kirk looking worn and tired in the first morning light. "Welcome back, Leslie," he cried and came over to take her hand. Impulsively she kissed him.

Ann was smiling quizzically over Sonny's head and Kirk was crimson with embarrassment.

"You'll look after me, Kirk?"
"Of course," he promised. But he felt anything but comfortable under Ann's critical eyes.

"I really believe I'll be happy after all!" That is what a radiant Sonny said the next morning as she and Ann lingered over their coffee in the sun-room, which gave a broad view of the East River.

"And two days ago I did not care whether I lived or died!"
Ann nodded understandingly. Sonny was so young. Her freshness made the older woman feel middle-aged.

"It wouldn't be easy, this job Kirk had given her, but Ann needed the money desperately. She went had to be paid. Even Kirk did not realize the plight she was in. Still there was Alex to be considered. Suppose she should lose him to this younger girl!"

Sonny interrupted Ann's thoughts with, "Can I buy anything I want?"
"Of course, within reason."

"Then let's get going!"

Three days later Kirk and Richard Rockford, his attorney and former classmate, were in Dick's office conferring with an insurance official.

"It is up to you, Kirk," the lawyer was saying.

"But I'm sure Mother will be opposed. You can't blame her."

"But somebody's got to do it," declared Rockford, "and you're the logical one." Then he added: "Miss Carmichael called me this morning. Do you know what Leslie did yesterday? She made application for charge accounts in most of the shops from 34th Street to the Park."

"I didn't think she'd learn so quickly."

"Ann Carmichael is a smart wacker."

"I know. But I had to take Leslie some place and that seemed best."

"I'm not saying it isn't. But somebody, who is interested especially in Leslie, has got to keep an eye on her."

"I certainly am not!"
"You are, indirectly, for the family's sake. The girl's bound to make the headlines again if you don't watch her."

"Sonny hasn't the faintest idea what she wants out of life."

"That's where you come in. You're just the person for the guardianship. I'll do the legal work, but you must put on the pressure. I can't talk to her. I tried. She's got to be educated to money."

"I'd much prefer somebody else taking the job."

"And find her without a dime in about five years—with a couple of husbands behind her?"
"I suppose you're right."

"I know I am."

"I'll talk it over with Father to-night."

"She's got enough money to make it worth somebody's while to take it away from her."

"Father won't like it."

Dick laughed: "She's ordered three fur coats. And one's a leopard skin. You know, spots and everything!"

Kirk groaned.
Dick continued: "She's got her head and she's running wild, Kirk. I warn you. You better get busy. I think Ann's getting nice commissions from the shops. Now that Ann's got her started, she can't stop her."

So in the end, Kirk and his father decided there was nothing for the former to do but to accept the guardianship. That meant Kirk must be responsible for Leslie for three years, till she was 21.

When Ann told Sonny the good news, she danced about the apartment, clapping her hands. She was wearing a pale blue negligee, very new. It dripped ostrich feathers, so did her slippers. Ann had done her best to prevent the purchase. It was the same day Sonny bought a crimson Spanish shawl and nine hats!

"You'll be sorry," Ann begged.
"You don't know yet what you want."

"No! I've always wanted hats. Now I've got 'em."

"What are you going to do with them? You'll have to buy dresses to match."

"Then let's go shopping this morning."

A week later, Sonny went to court to have her guardianship settled. She arrived at Kirk's office, half an hour late. She came in wearing a sheer black frock, and a big black hat. Everybody turned to look at her as Elsa Wright showed her into Kirk's office.

Sonny rushed in and threw both arms about Kirk's neck: "I'm so happy, Kirk. Don't I look lovely?" She stood back for him to admire her frock as, his face crimson, he watched Elsa's hurried departure.

Kirk did not answer Sonny. He just looked at her fussy black hat, the too sheer frock. Then he pushed the buzzer on his desk. Elsa came in promptly.

"Miss Wright, will you take Mrs. Hollister with you? Go downstairs to the nearest shop. Get her a simple black dress and hat and come back here just as fast as you can."

Sonny, wide-eyed, stared at Kirk: "What do you mean?"

"Go with her, Leslie? I'll talk to you when you come back."

"What's wrong with these clothes?"

"Everything!" He tried to soften the blow by coming over and taking her hand.

"You're going to court, not to a cocktail party. There will be newspaper people there. You should wear inconspicuous clothes on such an occasion."

"You don't want me to look my best?" Sonny's mouth set in a rebellious line.

"Do you want me to be your guardian?"

"Of course."

"Then I insist on having my way about this."

Tears came to the girl's eyes. She turned abruptly on her high French heels and went out the door.

"Get some decent shoes, too," Kirk added briskly to Elsa as he turned back to his desk.

Half an hour later, the girls were back. Sonny stormed into his office. She had on a black silk tailored frock, medium-heeled shoes, a small black hat. She still carried the ornate black bag.

"Look at me! See what she did to me!" Sonny's eyes blazed.

The dress might have been better. Kirk admitted to himself, but at least it was simple.

"It's horrible! I look like somebody's maid!" she protested.

Kirk appealed to her: "I ask you to do this for me, Leslie. Will you?"

His tone was kindly but impersonal, but his eyes pleaded with the rebellious girl.

Her quick anger faded. "You're the only person in the world I trust," she burst out impulsively, "but I don't want your pity!"

"Leslie, dear, I'm trying to help, that's all."

"I know."

They went to the court building. Attorney Dick Rockford was waiting for them. There was a crowd of reporters and photographers.

Court routine was swift and Kirk Hollister soon found himself guardian of his sister-in-law, Leslie.

Back in the car, Leslie smiled up at him: "Must I do as you say?"
"Absolutely!" Kirk tried to frown.

"Must I, Mr. Rockford?"

"We'll do our best to make you, the lawyer replied with assumed severity.

Sonny grinned impishly: "I hate being told what to do."

"I'll probably end up by spoiling her dreadfully," Kirk remarked to Dick over Sonny's red head. She had taken off the simple black hat, thrown it onto the floor as a gesture of rebellion.

Kirk, amused, said: "I don't expect you to like that hat, Sonny. But I asked you to wear it for me, and you did. You can throw it out the window now if you like. It has served its purpose."

She picked up the hated hat, twirled it on her finger: "It really isn't so bad—er—will you take me to lunch, Mr. Guardian?" Sonny's eyes pleaded.

"I'll not only take you, I'll take Dick too."

Of course, she would have preferred to lunch with Kirk alone. The lawyer, reading her mobile face, could not repress a smile.

1942

We are all looking forward to 1942. Wondering what that Kid will look like.

What great things he'll do. If it rested on my judgment, He will give a lusty squall. His ruddy face and muscular arms, Will win us one and all.

That Kid has got real work to do, I know he will do it right, From the first day he joins our ranks,

That Kid has got to fight. You will never have to nurse him. For when he looks around, He will hop out of his cradle,

Then things will start to bound. He will yell bring on your hitlers, That island of Japanese, I will have to spank that ignorant crowd,

Lay them across my knees. I don't expect much trouble, Why I've the men and might, Before another year rolls round, I will set the whole world right,

Hitler's "Secret Weapon" Against U. S. is "Jap" Attack And Their Declaration of War

Moscow had been evacuated by the government and Nazi troops were driving eastward on all three sectors of the bloody battlefield. Today, the government has returned to Moscow (Stalin never left as the Germans falsely alleged), the German armies are retreating swiftly in every sector, desperately striving to keep the conflict from their own soil, and Hitler has felt "intuitively" compelled to dismiss General Field Marshal Walther Von Brauchitsch and appoint himself commander-in-chief of all Nazi forces.)

"There will never again be a Red Army of fantastically armed millions. These untold resources and raw materials and wealth of the land will be turned to a new task by me: I intend in the shortest time possible to turn Russia into the European bread basket, the factory and the industrial nerve center. There is no limit to its possibilities, and we know how to make the most of the opportunity."

Outside it was getting dark, although it was scarcely five o'clock. Fidgety attendants and adjutants were sufficient proof that I could soon go, down through the path to the spur of railway track with the little station especially built near Fuehrer headquarters to receive visitors from the outside world. They came and go all day long, handled with care or politely given their bill of fare as served on the new order program of Hitler's Europe.

Here, in that very same room of the fireplace and round table, Hitler plotted his revenge against the man in Washington he fears. Here, in the very chair I sat in, sat time and again Japanese ambassador in Berlin, General Oshima, Yankee Hater No. 1 and in a way the father of the revived anti-Comintern pact.

In this room Hitler and Oshima in company of Champagne King and Foreign Minister Ribbentrop put their heads together repeatedly to hatch out in long and weary sessions the exact details of the plot against America.

The political consent and agreements between the governments of Tokyo and Rome for such a policy undoubtedly were the first essential. That is shown by the fact that Mussolini during the late summer and fall twice came all the way from the Seven Hills to Fuehrer headquarters in Russia. Even then, I doubt if today either Oshima or Mussolini could identify the exact location of Fuehrer headquarters.

You never ask Hitler any questions like that any more than you get down to brass tacks about his girl friends. You can do that with Mussolini and he'll talk by the hour of love and lovers, but never Hitler.

Knowing the ways and methods of Hitler after all these years, I could easily imagine the process and procedure arrived at in weaving to perfection Hitler's two-fold move against the United States.

As far back as the forging of the three-power pact in Berlin he laid the ground work for his war of revenge and desperation against Roosevelt. From that basic political agreement of September 1940 the wily Fuehrer was able to spin his web of intrigue and world war.

He was beginning to lay his guns for Russia, and in strictest confidence was able therewith to assuage both Mussolini and Hirohito. He told them to be patient and keep in mind that Nazi Germany in its conception would always remain the mortal foe of Bolshevism Russia. But they must hide their time and do nothing prematurely.

It explains the strange self-assurance of both Italy and Japan during the trying six months that followed, interspersed with rumors of trouble underneath the surface between Berlin, Tokyo and Rome. Actually, this was a false front deliberately manufactured by the propaganda machines of the three countries to hide from the Anglo-Saxon world and from Soviet Russia the deeply laid plot that was brewing.

Once set on this course, Hitler rid himself in Berlin of the pro-American Japanese ambassador Kurosu, who had replaced Oshima in the latter's downfall after the signing of the Hitler-Stalin deal in August of 1939. Early in 1941 he maneuvered the reappointment of Japanese ambassador to Berlin of General Oshima and from that time on the Fuehrer had a free hand to chart the course of his Machiavellian plot. It was not definite at first whether this radical resort to war against America would become necessary after a blitz defeat of Russia. In fact, Oshima was convinced America was bluffing and would back down before Japanese demands if behind these demands in the Far East stood Hitler and Mussolini as victors unparalleled on the battlefield of Russia.

The failure subsequently by the German armies to secure that blitz decision over Stalin in 1941 seriously upset the appeasement for the tri-partite plotters and there remained only the single choice of tackling America before it had an inkling of what was up. Several changes in Tokyo governments had to be made to oust all timid factions and Mussolini engaged in some internal head knocking of his own before the tri-partite regimes stood ready to face the zero hour Hitler so cleverly and ruthlessly had set.

It remained then for all concerned to map out in the last and finest detail the military coup aimed to knock out both the American and British spearheads of defense in the Pacific.

I can imagine that day after day in this room where I sat Hitler expounded the absolute need for secrecy and surprise.

An Italian mission from the general staff and a group of high officers from the general staff from Tokyo soon met in the finely shielded remoteness of Fuehrer headquarters.

There before the maps of the Pacific and Far East Hitler's pencil drew a circle around the spot identified as Pearl Harbor in Hawaii. He drew similar circles around tiny dots of the Midways, Wake Island and Guam, denoting the Philippines with a cross for occupation by Japan.

My guess is that the Dutch East Indies, Singapore and Australia were treated similarly. Each and every pencil mark called for action at a given moment by the Japanese fleet and air force. The consultations over details with the German General Staff and the Japanese military must have been long and lengthy, guided always by the Hitler plan.

Then, after the initial attack, Hitler and Mussolini were to come in with a moral boost for Japan by declaring war on the United States.

The military operations of Axis against America came in for the same precision, leaving nothing to chance or in favor of British-American cooperation. No doubt the weight of the Axis blow was to be against the British empire and against America in the Atlantic and Africa, keeping both so busy that out in the Pacific Japan faced an enemy worried by a two-front war. It took a lot of painstaking preparation but once the time was set and the signal given those who sat in this room before me shook hands and considered it a job well done.

Of course it goes without saying that Hitler in his scheming of this giant plot had not overlooked the importance of correlating German and Japanese efforts in the Far East itself.

That would have been a vital error. He needed a good machine of intrigue out in Tokyo and Shanghai. He set out to build himself one to suit, based on battle-scarred and six-foot Major-General Ott, his ambassador in Tokyo. Ott is a powerful and influential man in Tokyo, who helped train Japanese troops and officers before the first shot was fired in Manchukuo. Some say Ott knows more Japan and her policies than the rapidly changing foreign ministers there.

Hitler appointed him in charge of the job of swinging Japan against America. He sent as able assistant Heinrich Stahmer, who sold the Japs the three-power pact. Stahmer was given the official title of ambassador to the Nanjing regime. But in actuality Stahmer was to smooth the way behind the scenes for Japan's complete immersion in the war and Stahmer always has done a thorough job of all assigned to him. He is not unlike Von Papen in this respect, although much younger.

A bright young man named Helmuth Wohltat, renegade protege of Hjalmar Schacht of the high collar and orthodox financial principles, was dispatched to the Far East to negotiate and shape into line the economic "new order" of the Pacific.

In Shanghai operated Kurt Meisinger, a retired colonel and former Gestapo chief in Warsaw. He had his fingers in the pie throughout the Far East and to him fell the task of keeping Ott on the right path. Hitler also sent Fritz Widemann to Tientsin after his return from San Francisco as consul-general there and told him to push the war in the Far East all he could.

Hans Borchers, the former consul-general in New York, was sent as aide to Stahmer, in addition to which scores of Nazi agents sailed or filtered away to the Far East, spreading even through Thailand and all vital points of the Orient.

The center of Nazi intrigue and pressure for war in the Pacific remained Tokyo, but Shanghai became the beehive of Nazi propaganda activity and machinery. Here the ever-busy Baron Von Puttkammer was assigned by Hitler to ride the saddle, and ride it he does. He has drawn to him a score of Nazi brain-trusters for the control and utilization of radio, press and cafe. All of it is part of that Hitler machinery operating against America and the British Empire in the Far East, such as the springing of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and the Philippines.

I left that place with the feeling that something was in the air. Actually I had come to it as closely as anyone outside of the plot could possibly have come to it. The war is on now, and my hunch that I would never again set foot in this house is now confirmed.

There was in my mind not so much at that time the things that Hitler said but rather the things that he had said in the years gone by in private and intimate circles. That was before the war, when he was still building up his armies and blitz machine. Without knowing for sure whether he would master even a part of Europe.

In those days he was hoping to find a way to smash Communist Russia but failing that, as he frequently stated, he would go down on the smoking ruins of Europe and leave no stone upon the other. He has repeated that same assertion since World War II got underway, and it is more than an assumption to say on my part that Hitler is fanatic and fatalist enough to carry out not only personally but for Europe the verdict he himself pronounced at the beginning of this war before the German Reichstag.

He put on his uniform of field grey, named those to succeed him in case of death, and declared that he would come out of this war the victor alive or the vanquished dead. He meant also that he would come out of the war complete master of Europe or go down under the greatest shambles of blood and ruins and scorched earth ever to blot out a civilized continent.

Thus, as darkness covered the woods and the train in which I traveled back to Berlin, I left a man committed to win or to die in this war.

With a shock I realized that down in his heart is gnawing intuition that the crest of the wave for him has passed. He may have heard that astrologers are saying that the eighth year of his favorable sign in the heavens is the last. It is a worrisome thing, sufficient to keep him awake and in a restless mood for many hours of the night.

He paces the floor or reads a book, trying to keep down the uneasiness in his mind and in his heart symbolized and personalized ruthlessly and mercilessly by the face of the smiling man he fears, the man who sits in the White House far out across the Atlantic—the man who keeps him awake sometimes until the break of dawn.

"Where the Bowlers Meet"

The Great Game of Politics

ty years ago we rejected the League of Nations, founded by Woodrow Wilson and embodying the one plan for permanent peace that had been advanced. Since then and until war actually threatened us again we had proceeded on strict nationalistic lines, assuming that we were amply protected by the two great oceans and that, despite our involvement in 1917, nothing that happened in Europe need concern us. When war broke out in 1939, we passed the Neutrality Act and adhered to the isolation point of view up to the time the thought that the protection of the British fleet might be lost to us through Axis victory was driven home.

—O—

THEN, and then only, did we awake to the danger and enact the lend-lease bill. That ended our aloofness. That finished our isolationism. From then on our progress toward the war was steady and inevitable. We began to convoy and patrol; we repealed the Neutrality Act; our ships were sunk and we proclaimed our desire to crush Hitler long before we became an active belligerent. This, of course, was an illogical position, but for a good many weeks it was the one to which we clung. Gradually we would have been compelled to abandon it and every clear-headed man knew before the Japanese attack that our complete participation was only a question of time.

—O—

SOON or late, other acts of aggression would have brought us fully in. The Pearl Harbor attack hastened that time and unified the nation more quickly. Now, fully involved, the fact that in this war, as in the last, British and American interests are common interests—and were from the start—is too plain to dispute. The untenability of the isolationist theory is now such that it appears impossible that it can be raised again. After the war ends, it does seem that the conviction will be general in this country as in England, that the only possible protection for future generations is an unshakable and unmistakable British-American alliance for peace and a prompt readiness to act jointly against aggressors.

—O—

THAT is the idea Mr. Churchill meant to convey—and it is still the one sound peace idea in a war-torn world. It is the Wilson idea of the last war and it would have worked then had the United States not scuttled it. It involves a revival, after this war, of the League of Nations, or the creation of some instrument along the League lines, in which the United States will play its full part and, as Mr. Churchill phrased it, the British and American peoples, for their own safety and the good of all, "will walk together in majesty, in justice and in peace." If that idea does not work, none will. There is no other.

The Way To A Soldier's Heart!

By BETTY BARCLAY

J—Is for Jellies and Jams
A—Is for Army camps and Appetites
M—suggests a Mixture of the two

Well, we homemakers don't want to miss an opportunity to keep our boys supplied with any of the homemade spreads that make them so happy. Army food is good, but a selection of jams and jellies made with sun-ripened fruits are always welcomed by hungry soldiers.

So now that fruits are in abundance... let's remember both our soldier and our family at home. Modern recipes always assure us of a perfect product and they save both time and energy. Each tested recipe turns out jellies with a half-minute boil and jams in only a minute or so. Every batch of fruit means half again more glasses and the rich flavor of fully ripe fruit. Try these today!

RIPE PEACH AND PLUM JELLY
(Makes about 7 medium glasses)
3 cups juice
4 cups sugar
1 box powdered fruit pectin

To prepare juice, cut in pieces (do not peel or pit) and crush about 2 pounds fully ripe peaches and 1 pound fully ripe plums. Add 3/4 cup water, bring to a boil, and simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If there is a slight shortage of juice, add small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again.)

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 3- to 4-quart saucepan.

Place over hottest fire. Add powdered fruit pectin, mix well, and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar, stirring constantly. Continue stirring, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1/2 minute.

Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

RIPE PLUM MARMALADE
3 cups prepared fruit
3 cups sugar
1/2 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, peel off yellow rind of 1 medium orange and 1 medium lemon with sharp knife, leaving as much of white part on fruit as possible. Put yellow rinds through food chopper; add 3/4 cup water and 1/16 teaspoon soda, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer 10 minutes. Cut off tight skin of peeled fruit and slip pulp out of each section. Add pulp and juice to cooked rind and simmer, covered, 20 minutes longer. Pit (do not peel) about 1 1/4 pounds fully ripe plums. Cut in small pieces, grind or chop fine, and combine with orange mixture.

Measure sugar and prepared fruit into large kettle, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well. Bring to a boil and boil gently 5 minutes. Stir constantly before and while boiling.

Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot marmalade at once. Makes about 8 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

I. water main to be installed by FLEETWINGS and an amount equal to such credit shall be paid by FLEETWINGS to DPC in amortization of cost and expense of constructing and installing the aforesaid water main and facilities without any responsibility whatever on the part of the BOROUGH of BRISTOL to pay DPC what FLEETWINGS has covenanted to pay DPC hereunder.

6. As to the sewer facilities: FLEETWINGS, acting on behalf of DPC agrees to furnish and install, 15" vitrified salt glazed sewer pipe from the plant now being constructed by it for DPC on Bloomsdale Road, Bristol Township, to the BOROUGH'S sewerage system at Bath and Milfin Streets, Bristol, Pa. This sewer pipe shall substantially follow the route shown on plans prepared by Messrs. Damon and Foster, Surveyors, i. e. Bloomsdale Road to Beaver Street, to Adams Hollow Creek, along and parallel with the said creek to Silver Lake, around and approximately parallel with the shore line of Silver Lake to Bath Street, at the underpass of the Pennsylvania Railroad and South on Bath Street to Milfin Street, where it will connect with the BOROUGH'S present sewerage system.

The aforesaid 15" sewerage pipe shall be laid under the supervision of the BOROUGH engineer and in accordance with methods and conditions presently existing within the Borough Sewerage System.

7. BOROUGH agrees to receive and dispose of all and only sanitary sewage from FLEETWINGS' plant on Bloomsdale Road, Bristol Township, for which service the BOROUGH agrees to make no charge.

8. The BOROUGH agrees forthwith to assist in every way in whatever steps may be necessary, legal or otherwise, in order to permit FLEETWINGS to construct and install the aforesaid water and sewage facilities, particularly obtaining such easements and rights of way as may be necessary in connection with such installation. All costs, expenses and damages that must be paid to private property owners in order to secure the aforesaid rights of way or easements are to be paid by FLEETWINGS.

9. BOROUGH agrees to maintain and operate the aforesaid 12" water main and the 15" sanitary sewerage pipe upon their completion by FLEETWINGS.

10. Upon completion of the construction and installation of the aforesaid sewerage facilities, the BOROUGH shall forthwith take title to such sewer and forever maintain the same, and DPC agrees to execute such instruments or documents as may be necessary to effectuate these purposes, and the BOROUGH shall have the right to make extensions of and connections into said sewer pipe and through and by means whereof to furnish sanitary sewer facilities to itself and to such users thereof to whom such privilege may be granted by the BOROUGH.

11. It is understood and agreed that FLEETWINGS is acting solely for and on behalf of DPC in seeing that the aforesaid water and sewer facilities are constructed and installed, and it is agreed that there shall be no liability whatsoever on the part of FLEETWINGS under this agreement should it fail to perform same.

12. The terms and provisions of this agreement shall be binding upon the successors and assigns of the parties hereto, and all rights, privileges and benefits conferred by this agreement shall inure to such successors and assigns. Particularly, but without limitation, the BOROUGH hereby agrees to furnish water service to any successor of FLEETWINGS in the operation of the plant, at the request of DPC or the War Department, and the BOROUGH hereby consents to the assignment of this agreement by FLEETWINGS to DPC, the War Department, or any other person designated by either of them. It is understood and agreed, however, that in the event of the assignment of this contract or agreement to any person, firm, or corporation other than FLEETWINGS who shall cease to use the said factory and premises for National Defense Work purposes or for Federal Governmental purposes, but shall divert the same to and for their own private use or purposes, then and from the date of such private use, such Assignee shall pay to the BOROUGH for sewage service rendered such reasonable compensation as shall from time to time be imposed and levied by the BOROUGH. So long as FLEETWINGS uses such sewage facilities, the BOROUGH shall make no charge for its service in receiving and disposing of FLEETWINGS' sanitary sewage.

The bride is a niece of Mr. Tomlinson.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Waldo D. Parker, rector of St. James Episcopal Church.

The bride was attired in ivory colored tulle, trimmed with old lace. She carried white sweet peas and gardenias.

The only attendant was her sister, Miss Elizabeth Tomlinson, of Great Neck, L. I. She wore a dress of old rose tulle, and carried cream colored carnations and pink heather.

The groom's brother, Mr. Budd Lloyd, served as best man. The newlyweds left for a honeymoon trip, from which they will return to Wilmington to reside.

(By the Rev. James R. Gaffey)

Pastor, Bristol Presbyterian Church

We thank Thee, O God, for Time. As we come to the end of another year we look back over the months that have passed and see wherein we have failed. We see our neglect, our faithlessness, our avoidance of duty. Forgive us, O God, of our many errors, and grant that we might profit by our own mistakes. Open our eyes that we might see Thy leadership, and open our hearts, that we might receive Thy Spirit. May a successful future be erected upon a past from which we have learned the lessons of Thy Divine providence. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

As far out of the formula movie territory as the title implies, "One Foot in Heaven," which opened last night at the Grand, presents a story that is as refreshingly different as it is richly entertaining. The country minister and his faithful wife come into their own in this picture starring Fredric March and Martha Scott. From their early trials, at times highly humorous, at others semi-tragic, to victory in a rousing struggle, and to final renunciation of material comforts for the sake of the Cause, they do themselves, and their calling, proud.

Latest of the frontier "epics" is "Badlands of Dakota." The picture, which comes to the Grand Theatre New Year's midnight and today, is of the same big-scale proportions that have marked its history-making predecessors. Like them, it embraces a glowing portion of frontier history, alive with characters which typify romance, adventure and glamour.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Lloyd Nolan who, as Michael Shayne, the wisecracking detective, is starred in "Dressed to Kill," at the Bristol Theatre, believes criminals would do well of they hired him to track them down.

While reading each of the three Shayne scripts, Nolan tried to discover the killer before reaching the end. His record so far is three misses.

"Mail Train," with Gordon Harker, will be the second show of a double feature.

Tomorrow's feature is "Forty Thousand Horsemen."

RITZ THEATRE

Richard Arlen, co-star with beautiful Jean Parker of "Flying Blind," which opens today at the Ritz Theatre, finds aviation roles right down his alley.

Penny Singleton is currently to be seen at the Ritz Theatre with Arthur Lake, Larry Simms and Edgar Kennedy in "Blondie in Society."

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—The last census showed that there are over 7,500,000 working girls in the United States.

A small minority of these are also "career girls," by virtue of their having progressed, usually from a modest beginning, to a commanding professional position. In this group we can find such personages as major busi-

KEEP IN TOUCH WITH DRAFT BOARD

Keep in touch with your local draft board!

This is the advice of draft officials to young men who registered under the law by which selectees are being called up for army service.

Those who registered with Bristol Board No. 1, are asked to notify the office of the board of any changes in status affecting any questions asked of them on the questionnaires they filled in.

This refers to marriages, births of children, added or decreased number of dependents, changes in residences or positions, changes in physical condition, etc.

There are to be, it is stated, changes in classifications in many instances.

In all probability some married men will be called into the service within a short time.

Business executives, commercial artists, creators of advertising, costume designers, models, and screen and stage stars.

The large majority of the seven and a half million working girls, however, are at this moment just that—working girls.

But not one of these should overlook or ignore the fact that she is a potential career girl, in some field or another, even though such a career may not be even slightly indicated at the moment.

Attractive perfection in appearance frequently plays an important part in the transformation of a working girl into a career girl, and the command of the art of make-up must be considered as essential to such attractiveness.

Before going farther, we must stress the point that the relationship of such things as make-up to perfection to careers must be very accurately valued, and that it is just as much of a mistake to over-value them as it is to place too low an esteem on their worth.

Perfect make-up can't make a talented actress out of a woman who commands no great degree of acting ability. Nor can it alone make an inefficient stenographer efficient and of extra-value to her employers.

As they concern the command of careers, all the details of personal grooming, and especially make-up, should be regarded in the light of their "package value."

It has been demonstrated time and time again that attractively packaged goods are sold sooner than those which are not, even though the contents of the package may be of equal merit.

This principle of attractive "packaging" can be applied to career-conscious femininity. All other things being equal, the girl who is "packaged" with an attractive costume, coiffure, and make-up will in nearly every instance gain professional advancement more quickly than one who is not.

All of this is elementary salesmanship, and involves no mysterious formulas or incantations whatsoever. A person's appearance can be a silent salesman of one's capabilities and talents. If you wish to go places, professionally speaking, see to it that your appearance is a worthy representative ever offered. Heading the list is a $25 United States Defense Bond, to be presented the winner by the Keystone Dairy Company. Eight other lovely and useful gifts will be given the winner and parents of the Derby winner.

First 1942 Baby To Receive Many Gifts

The rules and regulations for the Derby, an annual highlight in Bristol and surrounding communities, are very simple. The winner must be born of parents living in Bristol or surrounding vicinity, and the entries must be born after midnight, December 31st, 1941. The rest is up to the storks now hovering overhead awaiting the starting signal.

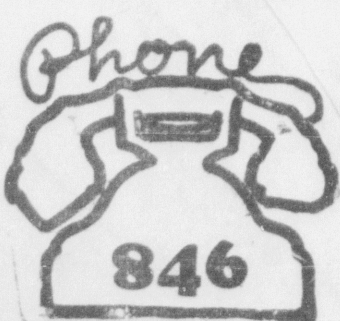

The swiftest stork will unquestionably drop the little bundle of love and joy who will wear a double crown, that of the New Year of 1942, and that of the Bristol Courier Derby Winner.

The name, address, and time of arrival of the winner will be published in the Courier on Thursday, January 8th, 1942.

Send the name, address, doctor's report and birth certificate of all babies born after midnight, tonight, to the Baby Derby editor at the Courier not later than 5 p. m., January 6th, 1942, to qualify in the race.

The list of co-operating merchants, whose advertisements appear in another section of today's Courier, together with the lovely free gifts that they will bestow upon the Derby winner, include the following: Keystone Dairy Company, $25 U. S. Defense Bond; Pat DiLorenzo's Drug Store, an attractive and useful gift; Ritz Theatre, Croydon, a free complimentary ticket to the parents for any five shows at the Ritz; Moffo's Shoe Store, a pair of baby shoes; J. S. Lynn, jeweler, a silver-plated baby spoon; Morry's Super Drug Store, a Hanscraft baby bottle warmer; Pal-Mar Cut Rate, a baby set gift box; Smith's Model Shop, a beautiful baskenette; and Straus' Cut Rate, a Mennen baby gift box.

The storks are anxiously awaiting the signal to go—the entry of 1942. Who will be the winner? Will it be just a matter of minutes before the winner arrives, or will the race be drawn out for a few days? The whole story and the winner will be announced in the Courier on January 8th.

Quick Holiday Dessert

You save time and give your meal a tempting festive touch both in one stroke when you decide to serve a prepared steamed pudding for dessert. All you have to do is heat it according to the directions on the package—and when family and friends take the first bite they are sure it was made with your own hands by an heirloom recipe.

Hard sauce is the traditional accompaniment for a steamed pudding—but some people like custard or fruit sauces—and others favor whipped or ice cream. For a colorful touch, decorate the serving plate with canned or fresh fruits. Use any of the three kinds of prepared steamed puddings—date, fig or plum—in making up the following recipe. You can get them in three different sizes to suit your needs.

Festive Steamed Pudding

Heat according to directions on label—

1 large can (1-lb., 11-ozs.) fig pudding.

Turn out on large cake plate and surround with—

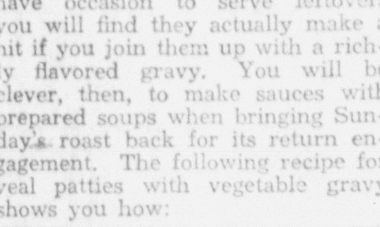

8 canned or fresh peach halves
8 canned or fresh quarters of pears.

Sprinkle peaches and pears with—

1 pound seedless or Tokay grapes, pulled from stem and washed.

Top pudding with—

1 cup whipping cream, whipped.
Serve at once. Serves 8.

Good Gravy

It's a foregone fact that men like gravy and lots of it. So when you have occasion to serve leftovers you will find they actually make a hit if you join them up with a richly flavored gravy. You will be clever, then, to make sauces with prepared soups when bringing Sunday's roast back for its return engagement. The following recipe for veal patties with vegetable gravy shows you how:

Veal Patties with Vegetable Gravy

Remove ½ cup of the broth from—

1 medium can (2 cups) vegetable soup.

Combine the broth with—

1½ cups ground leftover cooked veal
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste

1 egg. Shape into 4 large patties, then fry in sufficient hot fat in skillet to brown well.

Combine remaining vegetable soup with—

1½ tablespoons flour.
Cook in saucepan until thickened, stirring constantly. Serve the veal patties with the vegetable gravy. Serves 4.

Sandwiches and Tea

"Blow" weather outside makes a cup of hot tea with tiny sandwiches an especially gratifying treat if guests happen to call. It's hospitality at its best—offered spontaneously when it's appreciated most.

You can make dainty tea sandwiches in a matter of minutes. Here are two unusual combinations which will give your tea the "something different" you like. Prepared mince meat gives the first one a holiday spiciness—and peanut butter plus tangy cheese offers tempting contrast. If you don't have a slicer to make your bread slices thin, just serve the sandwiches open-face style with a piece of red candied cherry or angelica on top for color.

Cream Cheese and Mincemeat Sandwich Spread

Soften by beating with a spoon—

1 package (3-oz.) cream cheese.
Add, mixing well—

2 tablespoons prepared mincemeat.

Spread on bread and cut in rounds and other attractive shapes with cookie cutters. Serve open-face style with bits of candied cherry or angelica on top.

Cheese Peanut Tea Crackers

Combine, mixing to a paste—

¼ cup shredded sharp cheese
¼ cup peanut butter
2 tablespoons chopped parsley.

Spread on crisp crackers. Serve with tea on cold days—tomato juice on hot days.
